SALCOMBE | DEVON

Our new state of the art, innovative brewery sits amongst the Devon countryside looking towards the Salcombe Ria. The brewhouse is a unique concept built on the site of a decommissioned water reservoir. This utilises the natural ambient temperature of the underground facility for storing our ales at perfect conditioning temperature. The site also has its own borehole which has recently started supplying the brewery with its own source of pure Devonian waters perfect for ale brewing.

PHEASANTRY | NOTTINGHAMSHIRE

Our beers are brewed using traditional methods, from malted barley, hops, water and yeast. This area of Nottinghamshire was an important hop growing region for around 150 years from the early 18th century, when nearby Tuxford had its own Hop Fair. Malting barley is grown on the farm today, and new hops have been planted for demonstration purposes, so that visitors can see the brewing process from beginning to end, and taste the finished product too!

WOODFORDES | NORFOLK

When good friends Ray Ashworth and Dr David Crease got tired of the same old beers, they were determined to change things up a level. With a passion for homebrewing and creating authentic flavours, they became part of a new-wave revolution, handcrafting their own beers in then 1960s. They raised the bar for good quality beer year after year. With great taste comes great demand and Woodforde's grew at record speeds. Through trial and error, energy and ingenuity and by using local barley and water from our own boreholes the Brewery grew.

St. Peter's Brewery is based at St. Peter South Elmham, near Bungay in Suffolk. The brewery itself was built in 1996 and is housed in an attractive range of traditional former agricultural buildings adjacent to St. Peter's Hall. Siting the brewery at St. Peter's was ideal because of the excellent water quality from our own deep bore-hole.
